GUIDE TO THE SURVEY OF HISTORIC RESOUCES ASSOCIATED WITH AFRICAN-AMERICANS IN NEW YORK STATE

Not to know is bad.
Not to wish to know is worse.
– African proverb

Knowledge of history gives hope. Too many, especially the youth, have lost hope, an essential ingredient for sustaining life, because they do not know who they are and about their powerful heritage of struggle and survival against the odds .... We cannot secure our communities if we do not first "save the memories of self."

Document Imaging for National Register

The State and National Registers of Historic Places Document Imaging program provides access to scanned images of New York's nomination documents and other related materials. Users of the system can take advantage of a powerful search program that can sort these nomination files based on a variety of information including Location, National Register Criteria, Architectural Styles, Building Materials and Areas of Significance.

The Geographic Information System for Archeology and National Register

Begun in 1989 this system provides a map depicting the approximate boundaries of each of the New York's State and National Register properties and districts. A second overlay depicts the general boundary of the state's known archeological areas. The user can simply select a county and town and then zoom into the map of the community to find the location of a listed property or known areas of archeological sensitivity. (All archeological sites are protected by a buffer zone)
